Others run unopposed

Three contests set for next Tuesday's election

Polls will be open next Tuesday, (Nov. 8) from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. for the general election in Appomattox County.

County Registrar Betty Ford adds that the Registrar's Office in the county court house complex will be open this Saturday (Nov. 5) from 8:00 a.m. to 5 p.m. so that registered voters may cast absentee ballots.

There will be contests in the elections for two of the county offices this year, and one of the state offices.

In the county's Clover Hill District, Horace W. Coleman, Jr., and David Nash are competing for the four-year Board of Supervisors term.

Coleman, the incumbent, is a retired insurance man active in a variety of public and civic organizations.

Nash, a businessman in the construction industry, is a member of the board of directors for the Virginia Road and Transportation Builders and was recently elected president of the Appomattox County Development Corporation.

In the other contested county election, Ida Bell Campbell is being opposed by Dan Herncall for the county treasurer's office.

Campbell, who has held the office of treasurer since 1972, is a member of the Treasurer's Association of Virginia and the Virginia Association of Local Constitutional Officers. In addition to her duties as treasurer, she operates a bookkeeping and tax service in her home.

Herncall, a realtor for more than 12 years, is active in a variety of civic, public and youth organizations in Appomattox County and has served as president and as a director of the Appomattox County Development Corporation.

In addition to the two contested county elections, one of the two statewide legislative seats relative to Appomattox County is being contested.

Claude W. Anderson, incumbent in the House of Delegates' 59th District seat, is being opposed Nov. 8 by Clyde T. Mayberry.

Anderson, a Buckingham attorney, has served in the House of Delegates for the past 16 years. He has served as chairman of the priviledges and elections committee, is second-ranking member of the Finance Committee, and a ranking member of the Labor and Commerce and Rules Committees.

Mayberry, a resident of Appomattox County, has worked in local industry, agriculture and the insurance business.

He is a member of the Virginia Taxpayer's Association, Independent Virginians for Political Action, and is the Central Virginia Coordinator for the American Agricultural Movement of Virginia.

In the second statewide election relative to Appomattox County, incumbent Howard P. Anderson, A Halifax County attorney, is running unopposed for re-election to the 18th District senatorial seat.

There are also five uncontested elections for county offices on this year's ballot.

J. Franklin Vaughan, the incumbent County Supervisor representing the Stonewall District, is running unopposed for the Board of Supervisors seat.

Monte W. Mays, incumbent Commissioner of the Revenue for Appomattox County, is also running unopposed for re-election this year.

Barbara R. Williams, clerk of the circuit court, will run unopposed this year for another eight-year term as county clerk.

And,Sheriff J. E. Richardson, who has served the past four years as the county's chief law-enforcement officer, will not be opposed on the ballot in Tuesday's election.

For the Commonwealth's Attorney office in Appomattox County, Thomas W. Lawson is running unopposed for this first term in that office.

Lawson, an Appomattox attorney, filed earlier this year following incumbent W. Sam Kerr's announcement that he would not seek re-election to the office of Commonwealth's Attorney.

County Registrar Betty Ford said early this week that she urges "all registered people to vote in this election." Ford notes that any registered voter in the County who has not voted in the last four years will automatically have his or her name removed from the voting list as of Jan. 1, 1984.

Mayberry takes contest

Darnell Mayberry and Bookie Johnson, both of Appomattox, tied for first place in last week's Times-Virginian Football Contest.

Mayberry and Johnson each missed accurately predicting only one game in the contest.

Going to the tie-breaker for a winner, Mayberry was closer to the actual game scores and has been declared winner in the contest. He will receive a check for $20 as first place prize.

Johnson will receive a check for $10 as second place winner in the contest.

The contest continues this week with full details of rules and prizes on page 9 of this issue of the paper.

Food giveaway planned

The Appomattox County Department of Social Services will distribute government surplus cheese, butter, and powdered milk on Thursday, Nov. 10. The distribution will begin at 9:00 A.M. at the Appomattox Depot on Main Street.

Only recipients of Food Stamps, Medicaid, and Aid to Dependent Children will be eligible for the surplus food.

Please bring your Food Stamp or Medicaid I.D. card for verification. If you send someone to pick up your cheese, please give them written permission and your I.D. card.

The distribution will be on a first-come, first-served basis.

Just finished the ceremony of tearing off a page from the big wall calendar and behold, it is November! Welcome. Thirty big days and two holidays, plus my wedding anniversary. No problem with moving the clock back for the semi-annual time change. Except that I am a stubborn sort some times and I waited until 2 p.m. Sunday rather than the official 2 a.m. This is birthday week for a lot of celebrities, including Henry Winkler, Jane Pauley, Dan Rather, Burt Lancaster, Larry Holmes, Walter Cronkite, and Roy Rogers. Also our friend, Louis C. Granato of Pine Street was 75 on Monday, Halloween.

Big day at Liberty Baptist Church here. Fine weather and church spirit brought out a large crowd, observing the start of Liberty's sesquicentennial.

So many football games, one is sure to find some of everything. One-sided games and others that go down in the final seconds for a decision. Such as Slippery Rock 24, Shippensburg St. 23.

Football and basketball seasons overlap.

As a youngster I thought my Dad was a great athlete. His top feat was walking across the yard on his hands. I never even tried that.

For a week now a lone sparrow has been showing up at my windowside bird feeder, seeking wildbird seed that last there yet. Yesterday, during half time of the Dallas Cowboy football game, said sparrow won attention by pecking on the windowglass.

Did not have many marigolds, but sure proud of the few now blooming.

Reading and listening to so much about Grenada. According to my figures, Grenada is about the size of Appomattox County.

Most on-the-scene war reporting I can recall was that done by Ernie Pyle in WW II. Remember? Made you feel right there on the scene with the GI's.

You do not have to be such an old-timer to remember when service stations were called filling stations.

If you have a friend who lives at some distance and you have grown to expect a Christmas card, birthday or anniversary card, but get your mail in none of the above seasonal and see a letter from that friend in the mail, you sort of expect bad news. Happened to me, and the letter was of misfortune to an old friend. Another name to my Prayer List.

Local business places are starting for the big fall shopping season. Busy times now to the end of the year. Read all about it in the Times-Virginian! Thanks for reading and seeya around.

After 38 years, love held true

By FRANCES ABBITT

When Betty Maxwell answered her telephone one day recently, a soft voice said, "Mama, this is Roberta. I love you."

Hearing the voice of her second child for the first time in over 38 years, Betty cried as she had never cried before. Tears of joy streamed down her face.

In 1945 Betty Ross Cook was living in St. Louis, Missouri. She had born a child every year for three years and times were tight. To make matters worse, her husband left, without warning, without a word as to where he was going.

Following the separation, Betty took her three children, Frances, the oldest; Roberta, the middle child; and James, the baby, and went to live with her parents there in St. Louis.

"I didn't receive any child support so I had to go to work. Mama baby sat and I worked. My oldest daughter was a bit on the sick side and often had seizures. Mama was so patient with her. And, Mama loved little boys so she really enjoyed taking care of little James," Betty said.

"Roberta, the middle child, cried a lot; a whole lot more than the average baby cried," said Betty.

One day when Betty came home from her job, tired and already discouraged, her father approached her and said, "I'm sorry but I'm afraid you will have to find another baby sitter for Roberta or make some other arrangements for her care. With your mother's health none too good, the crying is just getting to be too much for her."

In Los Angeles, California, there lived a sister-in-law, she was the sister of Betty's husband. She loved children; so did her husband but they were unable to have any of their own. In desperation, Betty wrote her sister-in-law. In a short time a letter came from California containing tickets to California for Betty and her one year and seven-month old daughter, Roberta.

Roberta grew up and one day as she was looking for something when her parents weren't home, she stumbled on a baby book hidden in a drawer. It was the record of a baby born in Joplin, Missouri and everything in the book fitted Roberta's description.

With her new found evidence, Roberta confronted her parents and they admitted she was adopted, however they told her nothing else.

In the spring of 1982 Betty Maxwell began to actively search for her daughter. Betty did not know Roberta's married name or where she lived. At this time Robert's adopted mother was deceased.

"It took a lot of work and searching but I finally got information about Roberta to her husband through friends and family. He took that knowledge home and confronted his wife with the facts concerning her birth and new family. She was overjoyed.

"Roberta dialed her real mother . . . "Mama, this is Roberta. I love you." This was not the voice of a little girl but a woman who is 40 years old and herself the mother of two daughters and one grandchild with a second one on the way.

A reunion, including Roberta's whole brother and sister, her half brother, and sisters; and her two step brothers and other family members is being planned but plans have not yet been finalized. But one thing is sure . . . a reunion will take place.
